Pembo was a very poor man who lived in the village of Baraka. Pembo used to live with his only dear goat and dog in the entire side of the river bank.

One day, Pembo got a report about the sickness of his uncle who lived on the other side of River Baraka.

He asked his animals to escort him up to the river point where he would board the boat to cross the river.

At the river point, he warned the two animals never to eat the food he had left in the house since he would come back late and would not get time to prepare supper.

Immediately he set off crossing the river, the two animals left for home.

When the two animals were almost reaching home, the goat started grazing on the pasture as the dog was waiting for her.

When the goat was fully satisfied, she asked the dog to take her back home. At home, the dog started feeling excessive hunger.

The dog immediately thought of going for hunting and he did so but all went in vain.

After coming back home, he smelt of the tasty food which was prepared by his master. The dog then decided to sneak into the house and eat all the food in spite of the warning given to them. The dog then washed the saucepan and covered it the way it was before the food was not eaten.

When the master Pembo came back, the thought of cleaning utensils first and he did so. Having cleaned the utensils, Pembo went and squatted down close to the saucepan of food.

Immediately he opened the saucepan, he realized that there was no food. He quickly called the two animals and asked them who had eaten the food but they all denied. Pembo immediately got a stick and angrily shouted at the animals.

Soon after raising up the stick, the goat started running away and the dog confirmed to the master that the goat was fully responsible for the food eaten. Pembo felt annoyed and promised to slaughter the goat and share the meat with the dog as their food in compensation of what was eaten by the goat. Till now, the great grandchildren of Pembo and his dog are still eating the goat meat.

52. Read the poem below carefully and in full sentences, answer the questions that follow.

Fellow citizens, listen to my message,
Here I am to teach you for free,
Poverty has no medicine just like HIV/ AIDs,
It can be treated in only one way,
Save a coin every day, it will take you further.

When one is poor,
One had Passed Over Opportunities Repeatedly,
Due to over sleeping, gambling and alcohol,
Where much time is spent with no payback.
But you have to spend money every day.

Even those in the struggle are failing,
Just because they do not plan what to do,
Luxuries, adulteries, bad peers and alcohol,
Are always taking their little earnings,
And leaving them in real poverty.

Listen, do not blame the government too much,
The taxes must be there and you're benefiting,
Start by saving and spend the balance instead,
Take children to school and ensure your health,
Then stop bad behaviours that will keep you poor.
