Nawaya is a hardworking seamstress. Like other seamstresses in Kourere Village, she sews people's clothes. This activity keeps her away from her home from morning to dusk.

One morning, Nawaya could not find her thimble. This small metal is worn on a finger to protect it when sewing. She therefore, started sewing with bare fingers.

Nawaya loves her job, but on that day, it was the opposite. Her fingers were badly pricked by the needle. As a result, she could not continue sewing.

She bent her head on the desk and slept. The boys nearby used that advantage and stole some clothes she had made. They also stole the money she had got from her customers.
