HIV/AIDS the Killer

The human body has what is called immune system. This system fights off infections. However, there is a virus called the Human Immuno-Deficiency Virus (HIV) which weakens the system. This virus is at present vital. A person who has this virus falls prey to infections which make him/her weaker and weaker until he/she dies. The condition of being vulnerable and weak is called AIDS which stands for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

There has been a great deal of controversy about the origin and ways of transmission of HIV/AIDS. This has influenced the course of scientist's research as well as people's attitude.

In 1985 and 1986, scientists announced the discovery of the new AIDS viruses, one in African green monkey and another in human blood from West Africa. This became the main evidence of the theory that the AIDS virus originated in Africa.

Eventually, scientists failed to find out the treatment for the fatal and deadly disease. They unanimously concluded that HIV/AIDS has no treatment, but it is preventive.
