Hawkers

Ahawker is a coomon sight on the streets of a city or town, or in a train compartment or bus. He carries his goods sometimes on his head; sometimes in his hands; sometimes in a bag, and sometimes in a small hand cart. He sells various kinds of small goods including sweets, drinks, books, pens, medicine and what not.

Hawkers use different tricks to attract the attention of the buyers. Sometimes they start singing or even start acting. Sometimes they are funny and sometimes annoying. However, these people usually sell their stock at a cheaper rate than that of the settled shopkeepers . This is possible because such vendors don't have to pay rent for a shop or a stall, or a salary to a salesperson. A hawker is, as if, a moving shop and a salesperson combined. But it is a pity that he has to do such hard labour for living from hand to mouth.

It has also been observed that some hawkers are not good people. At times they sell fake or expired goods. Sometimes wrong doers disguise themselves as hawkers during the day and at night they come back to steal from where they sold articles, or direct and aid thieves to come and rob the houses where they transacted business. So, it is always wise to deal with hawkers cautiously, to avoid falling in their traps.

Personal letter I love you
Though enough I can't describe you
Because through you a lot we achieve.

Invitations and apologies
Requests and thank you's
Through you all these pass.

Relatives and friends all
To chat, inform and greet
Your avenue they exploit
And send lovely messages to soothe us

Indeed you're easy to write, oh friendly letter
No rigid rules characterise you
Like an ordinary conversation you proceed
Jokes, similes and sayings you accept
For you only one address and one name are enough.
