Four years ago, Titus decided that he would join Merikit Technical School, Luwero. This was after his Primary Seven. Most people in the village laughed until they cried. They told him it was useless joining a technical school.

"You will die poor", they told him.

Titus did not listen to them. At the technical school, he preferred tailoring to carpentry. Four years later, Titus qualified as a tailor. Since he had his own sewing machine, and the tools used in tailoring, he rented a lock-up. And he started patching people's clothes and sewing uniforms for school going children from there. Within a year, Titus had saved a lot of money. He used the money to build his own lock-up. Within that very first year, some boarding schools hired him to sew uniforms for their pupils.

Soon, Titus bought a car to ease his movement to town where he bought some materials and the required tools. He also employed two people to help him with the work.

Crossing a busy street

The streets of Lagos are so busy,
It's not at all easy
To cross them without care-
There's traffic everywhere.

The cars that roar past
Are often very fast;
You have to be very smart,
But you must never dart.

Obey the Highway Code
Whenever you cross a road;
And remember what your parents say-
Never go into the streets to play.
