Kiryagana wanted to withdraw some money from his account in Equity Bank where he was a customer. He was going to clear his son, Zadoki's medical bills. Zadoki had been diagnosed with serious malaria and treated successfully at Sans Medical Centre, Kibaati-Kansanga. Kiryagana also wanted to pay his DSTV subscription which had expired some days ago.

When Kiryagana reached the bank branch at Mapeera, he was denied entry in the bank because he didn't have a face mask. To make matters worse, there wasn't a single vendor nearby selling masks. He suddenly remembered that he could easily use his ATM card to withdraw money. However, when he checked his pockets, his wallet in which he keeps his cards was missing. He quickly remembered that he had forgotten it in his pair of trousers he had worn the previous day. At that time, he had to find a quick solution. He moved away from the bank premises to look for a mask. After searching for about twenty minutes, he was able to find one. He followed the health guides that had been set up by the health workers and went back to the bank.

Upon returning to the bank, Kiryagana was told by the bank security officials that business hours had elapsed, so he was advised either to use the ATM or return the following day.

QUESTIONS:
